Sound-Based Word Drills

The site offers 42+ drills, covering word groups introducing English sounds.

Real-Life Topics

Each drill includes a theme—like telling time or dog training.

Learn to Write

The site includes articles on how to compose documents complete with templates and examples.

Literacy Opens Doors

This site is my way of holding the door open for anyone ready to take the next step — at their own pace, in their own way. I'm a lifelong learner myself, and I want to encourage others to be, too.

This site is designed to help older learners build a strong foundation in reading—whether exploring at their own pace or working with a learning coach.

The material is free to use, with no sign-ups, no tracking, nothing to buy, and no ads — just tools and encouragement.

If you think this could be useful, please feel free to forward the link or share it with someone who might benefit. You can pin page one to a bulletin board. If this site can ease the load for even one coach or offer one learner a new way in, I'd be glad.

Topics for Grown-Up Life

The material may seem whimsical at first glance, but it was selected for adults. The read-aloud sentences are drawn from real-life adult topics. Examples include:

- Travel: My electric bike is great for summer travel.
- Weather: The sun heats the Earth unevenly.
- Food and Health: Limit salt and sugar in your cooking.
